Masquerade Celebrates 50th Anniversary Tonight

A tale as old as time, Judges' Choice Award winner from Comic-Con Special Edition, 2021

The Comic-Con Masquerade turns 50 this year, and the event starts tonight at 8:30 pm in Ballroom 20. To celebrate the anniversary, Comic-Con's throwing a masquerade viewing party with music and dancing with Channel 933's DJ Chino in the Sails Pavilion. We'll have special black and gold commemorative buttons, eats and treats, and a no-host bar for beverages.

Doors for the Masquerade will open for audience seating at 8:00 pm, but the line for choice seating will start forming earlier. To help audience members avoid waiting in a lengthy line, free seating tickets will be given out at 12 noon near Ballroom 20, and again after 3:00 PM at the Masquerade desk nearby. A ticket assures that you will have a seat, so you can then go enjoy your day and return later. Tickets are not required, however, and once the ticketed line has all gone in, then anyone without a ticket is welcome while seating remains. Ballroom 20 holds nearly 4,000 and sometimes fills, but to accommodate, the Masquerade will also be shown simultaneously on large screens in the Sails Pavilion (about 500 seats) and Ballroom 6A (no tickets needed for either). For more information on attending the Masquerade, see the Events Quick Guide, pp. 18 and 19.

A Little History

Costumes have always played a vital role at Comic-Con. The Masquerade on-stage costume competition premiered at the fifth Comic-Con, on August 2, 1974, when the entire attendance of the convention, set at the El Cortez Hotel, was just over 1,900 people. The legendary June Foray (voice of Rocky the Flying Squirrel, Cindy Lou Who, Granny from the Warner Bros. cartoons) acted as emcee that Friday night and oversaw a contest full of superheroes, Star Trek cosplay, and a few classic movie monsters. That Masquerade's winner, Charlene Brinkman, even went on to run the Masquerade for several years. Eventually, in 1986, the event moved from Friday to Saturday.

Early on, a popular recurring emcee was radio disc jockey Gabriel Wisdom, who donned a winged helmet and wig, and brought a large hammer prop made of rectangular mirrors, becoming The Mighty Thor, emceeing in character. The Rocky Horror Picture Show was at the top of its popularity, and there were many submissions featuring the film's characters. It was during this era when the rather unfortunate "No Peanut Butter and Jelly Rule" became necessary after one contestant's strange costume idea went, well, rather rancid.

Among the many more tasteful moments came in 1989, when contestant Allen Lavigne crafted an impressive Hawkman costume along with a large hollowed-out boulder to be perched on, worn by his wife. When he hopped off it, wings majestically spread, to the middle of the big Civic Theatre stage. He finished his performance, but forgot about the rock. His wife in the rock costume, unsure what to do, crawled slowly off stage. Partway there, the voices of a few in the audience rose with chants of "Rock...Rock!" and then were joined by most of the audience. For many Comic-Con Masquerades afterward, the refrain "Rock...Rock...Rock!" would spontaneously rise up from the audience at least once or twice per show.

In 1979, Comic-Con moved to the San Diego Concourse, (known as the Convention and Performing Arts Center at the time) with the Masquerade in Golden Hall. Depending on availability, the Masquerade in the 1980s bounced around between Golden Hall, the El Cortez Hotel, the Civic Theatre, and even Symphony Hall. For the latter venue, large buses were used to shuttle about 1,700 attendees and contestants from the Concourse to Symphony Hall, and then back again.

Over the years, emcees often changed, as did the Masquerade showrunner, with an especially dedicated one in 1986 who eventually became the current president of Comic-Con.

As Comic-Con moved to the then-new San Diego Convention Center, the Masquerade expanded into more sections of the center. The Masquerade moved to Ballroom 6ABCF and got its first truly huge audience line, the largest one ever seen for anything at Comic-Con or at the convention center itself at that point.

In the 1990s, Phil and Kaja Foglio became our regular emcees, occasionally missing a year due to scheduling conflicts. A few years later, the second half of the center was completed, and the newly built Ballroom 20 became the Masquerade's 7th and current home. Through all those decades our technology continually improved, of course. The box of audio cassettes carefully placed in order evolved into a box of CDs, eventually becoming USB drives.

During the difficult two-year COVID shut-down, the Comic-Con Board of Directors deemed there should never be a Comic-Con without a Masquerade, so even during our two online virtual Comic-Cons, there were still Masquerades, also hosted by the Foglios, and with amazing costumes from a dozen different countries. Today, 50 years from the very first event, with an audience numbering over 5,000 and an estimated 2,000 costume entries later, Comic-Con once again presents the Saturday evening event that gives costuming the spotlight it deserves. Don't forget that if you're too tired to stick around for the judging, the winning costumes will be listed in tomorrow's issue of Comic-Con Today.

Toucan Tip of the Day

Today, Comic-Con celebrates the life and films of the undisputed King of Cult Films, Roger Corman. Corman directed over 50 low-budget films, mostly from the mid-1950s through the 1970s, and produced over 400 more. He gave a start to a generation of film directors such as Francis Ford Coppola, Ron Howard, Martin Scorsese, and James Cameron. He also gave early roles to many top actors, including Jack Nicholson, Dennis Hopper, Bruce Dern, Diane Ladd, and William Shatner. Roger Corman passed away on May 9, 2024, at the age of 98. He will be missed.

Comic-Con is proud to present the following Roger Corman films today:

- Little Shop of Horrors (1960), directed by Roger Corman and starring Jonathan Haze, Jackie Joseph, and Jack Nicholson, unrated (10:00 am - 11:13 am, Grand 5, Marriott Marquis San Diego Marina)
- The Intruder (1962), directed by Roger Corman and starring William Shatner, PG-13 (5:15 pm – 6:39 pm, Grand 5, Marriott Marguis San Diego Marina)
